ac greatest governments of the world, of silver to gold is greater than in the United States. They are Japan and Mexico and there are eight which regold. Another table taken from the same report will show to all the effect of the ratio upon silver as a circulating medium. That table shows the amount of silver in circulation in ten of the

215,000,000 60,000,0 125,000,00 90,000,000 25,000,000 900,000,000

It is here shown that in those countries where the ratio is the lowest the ratio is the highest the circulation is the lowest. France with a low ratio and has $900,000,000. Japan with the highest ratio has only $50,000,000. Mexico is one of the richest in silver of of the most productive; it has only $50,000,000 silver in circulation. This can only be accounted for on the ground that its silver dollar is too rich and is carried away to other countries where t is recoined at a profit. The United States is the next on the list and it can day not be presumed that any great portion of silver will flow here from other countries where it is more valuable.

Before I leave the subject of the relative values of gold and silver, I will refer again to the unfounded charge, that the dollar of the United States a depreciated one. The table given showing the ratios in different countries, proves that the silver currency of this country is richer in silver as compared to gold than any of the European countries given. In all of them the ratio is 15.5, except one, in which it is 15.3. In the United States it is 15.98, ain objections to free coinage

I have now answered some of the ested effort to destroy one of the monsprings from personal motives, in which the public interest is utterly long after by the influence of the friends ignored and swallowed up in selfish Now why should there be free coinage? This is the great question. First, for the reason that it is a sound, safe war. It is always a dollar and is good for what it professes to be. On the shores of the Atlantic, in the vallies of the Mississippi, in the mountains of the other things, the town will be out of west and on the golden shores of the debt, and proposes to burn its last bond years England has been fighting silver.
